Check frequently; never leave captured animals unattended. Handle used traps with gloves.

4. Warnings and precautions

Keep out of reach of children and pets. Not a toy. Do not ingest. Avoid contact with eyes, mouth, skin, hair and clothing. Wear protective gloves and wash hands after use. Keep away from food and food-contact surfaces. Position so that birds and other non-target animals cannot reach the adhesive. Check regularly and remove or replace damaged, dirty or saturated traps.

Use only where the rules of the country and location permit it. Never use adhesive traps to catch vertebrates where prohibited. Comply with any professional-use or licence requirements. Place the product so that non-target animals cannot become trapped. If an animal is caught accidentally, obtain professional assistance immediately.

5. Accidental contact and non-target animals

Skin: gently apply vegetable oil to loosen the adhesive; do not pull. Afterwards wash the skin with soap and water. Objects: first test vegetable oil on a hidden area; it may stain or damage some materials. Do not use solvents on skin or animals. Eyes: rinse with clean water and seek medical advice; do not apply oil to eyes. If swallowed or if irritation persists, seek medical advice and show the packaging.

Non-target animal: do not pull it free. Contact a veterinarian or wildlife rescue immediately. If professional help is unavailable and it is safe to intervene, use a small amount of vegetable oil locally to loosen the adhesive, avoiding eyes, nose and mouth. Do not soak the animal. Arrange professional care after release: oil can affect feathers and temperature regulation. Do not release an injured or oil-covered animal without professional advice.

6. Storage, disposal and traceability

Store in the original packaging in a dry place, protected from dust, heat and direct sunlight. Dispose of used traps and packaging in accordance with local rules. Do not release adhesive or traps into the environment. Keep this sheet and the packaging, including any batch marking, for product identification. Report safety concerns to the manufacturer.
